Headline:
Persistent rain and strong coastal winds developing into Saturday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Scattered showers and clear spells Friday evening. Cloud building through the night and showers merging into longer spells of rain, heavy at times, through early Saturday morning. Increasingly strong and blustery winds along the coast. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Saturday:
Cloudy start, the spells of rain continuing before a band of persistent and sometimes heavy rain arrives midmorning. Coastal gales possible early on, then remaining blustery. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Sunny spells and showers, locally heavy and thundery, on Sunday and Monday. Potential for more persistent rain Tuesday. Generally breezy, with notably strong winds possible in the south on Tuesday.
